

HARTFORD FAMILY RESOURCES DIRECTORY 2015

HARTFORD FAMILY RESOURCES DIRECTORY 2015

A COMPILATION OF HARTFORD'S RICH ARRAY OF FAMILY RESOURCES

Many factors make Hartford special, but none is more special than the abundance of high-quality family resources that are available to the people of Hartford through its schools, through its city and state agencies, and through its wide array of nonprofit human services agencies.

All together we have more than 350 organizations in Hartford that provide family resources to our children, youth and adult populations. This huge number of service providers can make it cumbersome for families to find the right organization for the specific resources they want and need. It also can make it difficult for service providers to coordinate with each other and to refer families to those organizations that can serve them most appropriately. For these reasons, Mayor Pedro E. Segarra has asked the Department of Children, Youth, Families and Recreation to take an inventory of all the family resources available in our city.

For our department, this has been a monumental task involving extensive research and highly sophisticated geo-mapping capabilities in order to develop a clear, concise and comprehensive set of documents that make it easy for anyone to find the family resources for which they are looking. The inventory we developed provides the name, contact information, location, mission, and, most importantly, the type of family resources provided by the 350 plus service providers in Hartford. The list of resources have been organized into seven categories:

- Civic engagement providers
- Youth and family enrichment providers
- Early childhood education & home daycare providers
- Workforce development providers
- Family resources provided by schools and institutions of higher education
- Family support services providers
- Family resources provided by government agencies

I believe that the resulting inventory and mapping of Hartford's family resources within this document is unique among all of Connecticut's cities and towns—in terms of both its comprehensiveness and its ease of use for those seeking family resources. My hope is that Hartford's families and service providers take full advantage of it so families get the services best suited to their situations and that organizations are able to coordinate most effectively with each other.

Sincerely,

José Colón-Rivas, Ph.D.

Director, Department of Families, Children, Youth and Recreation

There are more than 350 organizations in Hartford that provide family resources to our children, youth and adult populations. This directory is a comprehensive directory of these organizations, providing the name, contact information, location, mission, and type of family resources provided by each of these Hartford-based service providers. The list of resources has been organized into seven categories—civic engagement, youth & family enrichment, early childhood education & home daycare providers, workforce development, schools & higher education, support services, and government agencies—and is designed to help build a strong, vital community and improve the quality of life for each Hartford family.

CIVIC ENGAGEMENT

To be civically engaged means to think, speak and act in the best interests of your family and you, your neighbors, and your broader community. It also means advocating for effective public policies, programs and practices. And it means inspiring others to add their voices and become involved in the ongoing effort to improve the quality of life in our city. This section of the Family Resources Directory lists the leading organizations in Hartford that can provide you with access to all the tools you need to become a community leader who partners with schools, faith communities and nonprofit organizations; engages in civic activities; promotes a safe and healthy environment; and advocates for families on the local and state levels of government.

EARLY CHILDHOOD EDUCATION & HOME DAYCARE PROVIDERS

Hartford is a leader in the state for advancing the progress of pre-school children by using scientifically proven and uniformly applied teaching practices. There is overwhelming evidence confirming the importance of high quality, safe and nurturing early learning experiences as the foundation for school success and lifelong achievements. Hartford is the first large city in the state to require all preschool providers, regardless of their funding sources, to report standard child progress measures based on the State's Early Learning Standards. As a result, the network of Hartford's early learning centers has become a landscape ripe for the development of a coordinated, seamless, early childhood system.

Hartford also has licensed family daycare providers—private family homes caring for up to six children. To be licensed by the State of Connecticut, a home-based provider must meet specific standards, and the children must be cared for not less than three hours and no more than twelve hours during a twenty-four hour period and on a regularly recurring basis. During the school year, a maximum of three additional children who are in school full time may also be cared for.

EARLY CHILDHOOD EDUCATION & HOME DAYCARE

LICENSED, HOME-BASED DAY CARE PROVIDERS

Licensed family day care homes are private family homes caring for up to six children—these may include the provider's own children who are not in school full time. To be licensed by the State of Connecticut, a home-based provider must meet specific standards established by the state. In addition, the children must be cared for not less than three hours and no more than twelve hours during a twenty-four hour period. However, on an exceptional basis or to accommodate special needs, care may be provided in excess of twelve hours but not more than seventy-two consecutive hours and includes intermittent over-night stays. In addition, care must be provided on a regularly recurring basis. During the regular school year, a maximum of three additional children who are in school full time may also be cared for. The provider's own children who are in school full time, regardless of how many, are allowed to be cared for by licensed home-based providers.

WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT

Most organizations listed in this section of the Family Resources Directory offer some form of workforce development. This includes traditional schools; academy schools dedicated to specific fields of study and work; nonprofit and government employers that provide on-the-job training for career advancement; and service organizations in the public and private sectors that offer career training for people with disabilities, limited English language proficiency, low literacy and math skills, and people recovering from addiction or readjusting to society after serving prison time. The array of workforce development opportunities in Hartford provides a way to increase equity among residents of our entire region. There are opportunities for low-wage earning inner city residents who may not have had access to a quality education, but who, through workforce development programs, can increase their skill level so they can compete with suburbanites for high-paying jobs.

The GBLC was remodeled in 2004 to create a state-of-the-art facility featuring the latest technology. The entire building is handicap accessible with handicap accessible restrooms on each floor and 24-hour secured access.

SUPPORT SERVICES

In our community as in most urban communities, Hartford has a population with a disproportionate number of low-income, under-educated families. Many of these residents require support services to meet their daily needs, prepare them to climb the economic ladder, and attain financial stability. Fortunately, our community also has an astounding array of high-quality support services provided by many nonprofit human services organizations. The services they offer include adult education, life skills counseling, financial capacity-building, food and nutrition supports, health services, housing assistance, legal services, violence and substance abuse prevention, along with referrals to other needed services.

SUPPORT SERVICES

THE FAMILY RESOURCE CENTERS

The Connecticut Family Resource Center concept promotes comprehensive, integrated, community-based systems of family support and child development services located in public school buildings. This model is based on the "Schools of the 21st Century" concept developed by Dr. Edward Zigler of Yale University. Family Resource Centers provide access, within a community, to a broad continuum of early childhood and family support services which foster the optimal development of children and families.

GOVERNMENT AGENCIES

Being the state's Capital City, Hartford is home to municipal family resources agencies as well as state and federal agencies. On the federal level, Hartford houses the regional office of the Department of Emergency Management and Homeland Security as well the regional office of the Food and Drug Administration. Among the many state agencies located in Hartford that provide family resources to Hartford residents are the Governor's Office, the State Office of Education, the Department of Families and Children, the Connecticut Department of Health, the Commission on Children, Department of Developmental Services, Department of Housing, Department on Aging and many more. While several agencies of Hartford's City government provide family resources, the two largest are the Department of Families, Children, Youth and Recreation and the Department of Health and Human Resources.

SPECIAL ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The Department of Families, Children, Youth and Recreation would like to thank United Way of Central and Northeastern Connecticut and 2-1-1 Infoline for their partnership and support. The Department also expresses its thanks to Victoria Rosado for her tireless review of resources and also to Metro Hartford Information Service (MHIS) for the use and support of their online geographic information system (GIS). Finally, a special note of gratitude to Joel Sánchez as this project would not have been possible without his commitment, team management, and creative leadership.

While this directory is comprehensive, it is not inclusive of all Hartford resources. If you don't find the types of services you are looking for within this directory, we encourage you to call 2-1-1 and speak with support staff.
